Lab-Grown Diamonds: A Market Revolution or a Passing Trend?

February 2025

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Why read this report?

Key findings

INTRODUCTION

Lab-grown diamonds, the bright spot in a modest growing industry

Overall luxury slowdown and cost-of-living crisis cause jewellery growth deceleration

The surge of lab-grown diamonds

THE SIZE OF THE PRIZE

Preference for diamonds differs significantly across regions and drops post-pandemic

The diamond industry navigates uncharted waters as prices continue to decline

Italy, the US and Australia see the largest penetration of lab-grown diamonds

A fragmented market: Unbranded products, small players and well-known brands

Retail e-commerce expands the reach of lab-grown diamond jewellery

Demographics, fine jewellery demand and LGDs' positioning define potential markets

LGD jewellery players must adapt their strategies as growth begins to moderate

UPSIDES TO LGD OUTLOOK AND THE US MARKET ROLE

Five trends to favour growth of lab-grown diamonds in the years to come

US accounts for over two thirds of LGD sales in 2024, but opportunities exist beyond

Australia: LGDs have gained share from natural diamonds but growth appeared to peak

Canada: Growth expected as consumers value affordability and sustainability of LGDs

Germany: LGDs' increasing popularity set to change bridal jewellery trends

India: Stable growth from consumer demand, brand expansion and government support

Italy: Diamond industry raises concerns amidst growing popularity of LGDs

US: Fine jewellery players maintain opposite perspective on LGDs

US: LGDs thrive amidst economic uncertainty but slow down as prices continue to fall

US: Customer interest in LGD jewellery becomes more specific and broader

US: Diverging approaches to LGDs between luxury and non-luxury players

US: Review of product portfolios among key LGD players across four categories

US: Opportunities for expanding the LGD jewellery market - a product perspective

US: Size vs price dilemma - competition is stronger for smaller diamonds

Expansion in the US: Capitalising on new segments and customer priorities

DOWNSIDES TO LGD OUTLOOK AND CHALLENGING MARKETS

What could limit LGD growth in the coming years?

Regulations and consumers' preferences challenge LGD growth in Asia and Europe

China: LGDs must go beyond traditional diamond values to resonate with consumers

Japan: LGDs remain niche and unlikely to see significant growth in the near future

France: Natural diamond brands' response slows down LGD growth

UK: LGD prospects fluctuate amidst regulations and market fragmentation
